

Hinkley stirs plea revision

By DOUG WILKS and CLARK H. CARAS Senior Reporters
WASHINGTON (AP) — Monday, Sept. 30, 1981 — President Reagan shot in the chest Monday by a white gunman who tried to assassinate him with a blaze of .22-caliber shot fire.

John Hinkley Jr. was the "youthful man" identified in the Associated Press story who pulled the trigger of a .22-caliber pistol. On June 21, 1982 Hinkley was and "innocent by reason of insanity" attempting to kill the president of the United States and of 12 other persons related to the shooting. Since the time the jury rendered a decision in the Washington courtroom, the issue of insanity as a defense has become the most talked about legal issue in the United States since the abolishment of capital punishment.

Change in defense
According to Noal Wootton, Utah County Attorney, the publicity given to the insanity defense has caused public opinion in America to demand a change in the insanity defense. Wootton said he and other prosecutors have felt the insanity defense has been abused for several years. "Now the Hinkley publicity will help us get change. And now is the time to push that change," he said.

Elizabeth Bernsten, attorney for the Utah Division of Mental Health, said, "The Hinkley thing set everything off. The question of whether to allow insanity as a defense or define it has been 'brewing for a long time in legal circles," she said.

Complex issue
The problem with deciding what to do "the issue is so complex," Bernsten said. A major problem is at the mental health system and the legal system sometimes don't mesh, she said. Dennis Cullimore, administrative director of the forensic unit of the Utah State Hospital, said, "The 'world sanity' is a legal term and not a medical term." He said this gives a lot of indication of the reason the two professions cannot agree on definitions.

Monday edition has new look

The issue of The Daily Universe brings something new to the BYU audience — a forum for people with significant ideas to deliver those ideas to readers in their own words. Since each Monday issue will be devoted to the presentation of ideas from qualified sources on and off campus. Editors hope, through this service, to accomplish several things. First, we want readers to be aware of issues and ideas that are important. We want those who can express the ideas most clearly to be able to state them directly to Universe readers with a minimum of interference from the editors. We see our role as identifying the unable to back into the car and face the front; instead, he leaped into us, his arms outstretched, and waited until the doors wheezed shut, when he found himself shoved back against the closed doors. Catching his breath, he suddenly became aware of the thirty-nine eyes of the ascending saints (one of them had a catarrh).

Then, nodding his Kojak-ed pate thoughtfully and authoritatively, he spoke to his quiet observers: "I suppose you all wonder why I've called you together this afternoon."

The effect was amazing. The effect was humor. Twenty individual strangers were instantly bonded together as a cohesive band of pilgrims and our combined belly-laugh roared up the elevator shaft even unto the gates of the Celestial City, or Skyroom, for the difference is not great. In a moment, one man had deftly touched our collective funny-bone, and suddenly it was "... a time for laughter," and the journey of each of the pilgrims was brightened and cheered.

I would like to define humor just a bit, examine a few of its traits, and illustrate some of its nuances.

Thus, when Robert Frost wrote, "Forgive, O Lord, my little jokes on Thee, And I'll forgive thy great big one on me," Frost is warming us with his wit. He is juxtaposing man against God, and the result is both ludicrous and incongruous. Note that Frost's humor here is not based on nature or accident; it is a product of art and skill — wit.

Still, it is not very productive to argue about where humor ends and wit begins. It is all comic. For example, consider this favorite story of my colleague, Dr. Woodruff C. Thomson, who sets it in Sanpete County, that earlier Mecca of Danish LDS converts. Sister Jonson, Sister Petersen and Sister Hansen are talking in the backyard one afternoon.

Sister Petersen and Sister Hansen nod in sympathy, and Sister Petersen says, "Yes, I am very sorry for Sister Olsen. She wants a little baby so much. But I think that you did not use dear right English word. What is wrong with Sister Olsen is not that she is incapable, but that she has a problem with Sister Olsen is that she is impregnable."

Sister Hansen nods and says, "You are both right and both wrong. It is a shame that Sister Olsen has not got a little baby, but you are wrong about her English word. Sister Olsen is not incapable; she is not impregnable."

"I heard Dr. Brudner Olsen tell Dr. Bishop da utter evening; the trouble with Sister Olsen is that she is unbearable."

Irving R. Kaufman, in an article written for the New York Times Magazine, said, "Essentially, the law is concerned with establishing fault ... Psychiatry, by contrast, is interested in identifying, diagnosing and treating mental disorders and in understanding the attitudes, actions and environmental causes behind such disorders."

Abolish bill
During Idaho's past legislative session, a bill was passed that many say completely did away with insanity as a defense in that state.

Bernsten disagreed. The bill does not completely do away with the insanity defense, she said. It depends on whom you talk to as to where the definition stands.

Wootton said during the upcoming Utah legislative session, a bill will be introduced similar to Idaho's. He said the Statewide Association of Prosecutors will lobby for passage of the bill. "Because of the Hinkley trial, we will probably get more legislative interest in the bill. Before that, with an issue such as this, legislators had a 'who-gives-a-damn' attitude," Wootton said.

Reagan bids farewell after Utah stint
Surrounded by Secret Service agents, President Reagan waves to well-wishers during his trip last week to Utah. While in Utah, the president's economic plan was dealt a serious blow by Congress, who voted to override his veto of a $14.2 billion spending measure. On a visit to the Ogden LDS Welfare Center cannery, Reagan praised the principle of self-help, saying, "It's an idea that should be reborn nationwide."

Football tickets short, more seating sought

By LISA MOTE Monday Editor
"Kevin Reeve, ASBYU athletics vice president writes memo on ticket sellout. See related story on page 2." BYU administrators met this weekend to decide what the university can do to reduce the immediate problems caused by the early sellout of the 17,000 student season football tickets.

Ronald Hyde, BYU assistant executive vice president for university relations, said three alternatives the administration plans to pursue are: seeking permission from the NCAA to broadcast the home games on the screen in the Marriott Center, starting a sell-buy program for students who are not going to use their tickets to sell them to other students, continuing to sell seats of people who do not show up at the game to waiting fans.

Although students were promised by members of the administration and the ASBYU Athletics Office that there would be as many student football tickets as needed, the football tickets were sold out by 5 p.m. Thursday — the day they went on sale.

Paul Richards, BYU public communications director, said 15,000 of the tickets had been reserved for student seating and the other 2,000 tickets were the cushion in case the tickets sold out.

Originally, he said, ASBYU requested 12,000 student tickets, but at the April meeting increased the number to 15,000. ASBYU can request as many tickets as they show they can use, he said, but in the past the students have never filled the number of seats ASBYU requested.

Although only 15,000 tickets were set aside for students, Kevin Reeve, ASBYU athletics vice president, said repeatedly that he was promised by Scott Williams, BYU special events director, that there would be as many extra tickets available as were needed.

Williams denied that, saying, "I can't be responsible for what Kevin's telling you."

Richards said if the students do fill up the 17,000 seats this season and the need for more tickets proves to be a legitimate need, more tickets will be set aside for students in future years.

For this year, however, the tickets are sold and the administration is trying to find alternatives to let the students find seats.

Hyde said one problem is that with the new stadium, the university can't sell standing-room-only tickets as it has in past years.

Hyde said the administration is "delighted with the enthusiastic student demand for football tickets in the new stadium," but regrets that the 17,000 tickets allotted for student purchases did not meet the demand.

Today the university is going to seek permission from the NCAA to show the home games on the screen in the Marriott Center, Hyde said.

"We expect to have a decision on this later in the week," he said. "There will probably be an admission charge, but we can't finalize everything until we have the word from NCAA."

Sell-buy
In addition, the administration and ASBYU plan to start a sell-buy program that would allow students who decide not to attend a particular game to sell their tickets to other students at a booth in the Wilkinson Center a few days before each game, Hyde said.

"This not only would give many more students a chance to attend games, but also would help keep the student section filled to capacity, thus showing strong support of the team," he said.

After the start of each game, users will, as they have in the past, look for seats of people who fail to show up at the game, Hyde said. "This, of course, may not provide a significant number of extra seats, depending on the game, but it is a program that is worth continuing," he said.

Richards said he thinks that after the rush on tickets settles down, tickets will be available from students who bought the tickets as a good deal but do not really want to use them. "We will just have to wait and see," he said. "We need to let things settle down. The most important thing is to let as many people see the games as possible, Richards said.

Y forum a laughing matter

Dr. Richard H. Cacerol, BYU professor of English and dean of the College of Humanities, at a Y forum Jan. 12, 1982, titled "A Time for Laughter: A Celebration of the Comic Spirit." It was another lunch time at Brigham Young University and this wonderful BYU administrator as wending his way through the Calvin Kleins and Jorjache joins to the Wilkinson Center and the gymroom, where I would sit as a token representative — albeit a well-used and most substantial ken — at yet another important luncheon.

Arriving at the elevator full of anticipation as to whether the BYU Sparkle — unsanitized 7-Up — should be pink or blue or clear on this particular day, I moved aboard the crowded 1202 and found myself lardened — albeit a very substantial and salty rind — with twenty other persons in a ten-person elevator. Suddenly, the ascending elevator stopped at the third floor and one of my faculty leagues, portly and totally bald, begged formittance.

The crowded inhabitants groaned, shuffled, and, squeezed in order to permit him entrance. So tight was the squeeze that the teacher was unable to back into the car and face the front; instead, he leaped into us, his arms outstretched, and waited until the doors wheezed shut, when he found himself shoved back against the closed doors. Catching his breath, he suddenly became aware of the thirty-nine eyes of the ascending saints (one of them had a catarrh).

Gas masks are one defensive safeguard used in germ warfare, but U.S. Army scientists are seeking better defenses against other countries' biological weapons. Scientists at Ft. Detrick, Md., are trying to make an improved vaccine for anthrax, which is commonly used in germ warfare. Other diseases being researched include Rift Valley fever, Lassa fever, botulism and hemorrhagic fever.

'Medical defensive research'

Army studying bio-war

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — The United States officially renounced biological warfare in 1969. But here, in a small corner of the military base where the American germ-warfare effort was located, Army scientists are still involved in "medical defensive biological warfare research."

With little public attention, the researchers are trying to discover vaccines or antidotes to any germ weapons that might be used against American troops.

The effort is based in a two-story Army lab in a corner of Fort Detrick, the sprawling base that was once the headquarters of U.S. chemical and biological warfare efforts.

Officials are sensitive about describing their work, which has continued since 1969, when President Nixon renounced American use of biological weapons and ordered the destruction of existing arms. But he said that a defensive effort would continue, to guard against possible germ attacks by an enemy.

"What we're doing is uniquely medical. We're involved in medical defensive research," said Col. Richard Barquist, the doctor who heads the Army Medical Institute of Infectious Diseases.

Part of the research here involves recombinant DNA, or gene splicing, to try to develop a better vaccine for anthrax, one of the most-studied germ-warfare diseases because it is hardy and highly virulent. The current anthrax vaccine is painful and slow-acting.

The Army has also contracted with Molecular Genetics of Minneapolis, Minn., for recombinant DNA research into a vaccine for Risk Valley Fever, a southern African disease that could be encountered by U.S. troops operating in the Middle East or Persian Gulf.

Barquist is quick to note that the gene-splicing work has been approved by the NIH advisory committee that oversees the safety of such projects.

"We're just trying to use the tools provided by modern biology" to come up with better vaccines, he explained. "We'd like to see if we can use to our advantage the technological wave sweeping through bio-medical research."

Critics of the Detrick research argue that there is little difference between "offensive" and "defensive" work. Barquist agrees. "As far as the research goes, there's no difference. But the U.S. is out of the BW business."

"What we don't do are mass cultures of deliverable weapons systems. It's all just medical research."

When Nixon's order shut down most of the American BW effort, much of Fort Detrick, created during World War II, was turned over to the National Institutes of Health, which set up a cancer research center.

About a mile from the Army labs are two grim reminders of the large-scale research and weapons program that made Detrick the world's largest consumer of guinea pigs by 1960.

The highest structure at the complex is a seven-story, red brick building with boards replacing the windows. It once housed research into some of the most dangerous diseases, like anthrax, tularemia and botulism. Now, no one is permitted to enter the contaminated structure because of fears about the long-lasting anthrax spores.

About a hundred yards away, a large silver tank stands atop a spindly legs, looking like a cross between a spaceship and a deep-sea diving bell. The 50-foot-high, one-million-liter fermentation tank was designed to brew enormous batches of germs that would go into bombs and other weapons.

The tank has since been added to the National Register of Historic Places, meaning it can't be torn down. Around it, workers are constructing a new medical building.

Across the base, about 300 civilians and 200 Army personnel are working at Barquist's lab, which has a budget of $18 million.

The army coordinates its research with the Atlanta-based Center for Disease Control and the World Health Organization, trying to come up with vaccines for the various infectious diseases.

A number of diseases have been identified by the Pentagon as most threatening, and those are at the top of Detrick's research list. They include Rift Valley Fever, Lassa fever, anthrax, botulism, hemorrhagic fevers and Marburg fever, also known as Green Monkey disease.

20 arrested in local drug bust

AMERICAN FORK, Utah (AP) — Some 20 people have been arrested in a Utah County drug raid following a two-month investigation, authorities say.

American Fork Lt. John Durrant said more than 40 warrants had been issued in the case, and more arrests were expected.

Officers from American Fork, Orem, Pleasant Grove, Lehi and BYU police departments joined Saturday with agents from the Utah Narcotics and Liquor Enforcement office, and Utah County Attorney Noah Wootton as a massive law enforcement raid got under way in northern Utah County.

The sweep followed an undercover probe of area drug trafficking. The warrants were issued after officers successfully made deals for a variety of illegal substances, including marijuana, hashish, LSD, methamphetamines and psilocybin.

Warrants were issued for 31 adults and 13 juveniles for a total of 49 offenses, authorities said.

Court appearances for those arrested were expected to begin Monday or Tuesday in 8th Circuit Court.

Scientist claims natural chemicals fight carcinogens

SEATTLE (AP) —

Though we sometimes seem to be drowning in a sea of cancer-causing chemicals, we're also floating on a raft of cancer-fighters, says a scientist who expects these natural "inhibitors" to play a potent role in preventing cancer.

Two carcinogen inhibitors were recently discovered in coffee beans, which also stand accused of causing cancer, said Dr. Lee W. Wattenberg of the University of Minnesota.

"There are opposing forces in the environment," Wattenberg told the 13th International Cancer Congress Wednesday. "There are carcinogens and also these anti-carcinogens. The question now is whether and how one can tip the balance toward inhibition."

He said in a subsequent interview the use of inhibitors, which are found in many fruits and vegetables, for cancer prevention "is on the horizon." But he also warned that much research must still be done and "it's very hazardous to translate this into recommendations at this time."

Anything that effectively blocks carcinogens could be of immense value. Some researchers contend environmental factors cause or contribute to as many as 85 percent of all cancers; others put the figure at less than 25 percent.

The Congress, with 8,000 delegates expected from 95 countries this week, is organized every four years by the Geneva-based International Union Against Cancer.

'Unto whom much is given'

From a speech by President Jeffrey R. Holland at the Annual Church Conference on Aug. 31, 1982, titled "Unto Whom Much is Given."

"Now, on a morning when we are speaking of the gift of the Holy Spirit, let me say just a word or two about our religious activity. In March of 1981, six months after my appointment, I announced in the June General Conference that we had set a goal to have one million dollars in contributions to the Church by the end of the year. It seemed now too soon for us to cultivate ever-greater private donations to implement the support given by the tithing of the members of the Church."

"But for all that — a very difficult economy and the reorganization at the top — we have had a year in development and believe we are right on target when we close this year's books in December 31."

"We will now use our Homecoming/Founder's week of October 11 to October 16 to make the public announcement of our campaign, share the results of our first year's advanced giving, and announce to the public our genuine commitment to meet the academic needs of the university — an effort to enhance the quality and stature of the university at BYU, including the program developments that we will most directly aid them."

"Our campaign title, as you know, is 'Excellence in the Eighties: The BYU Campaign for Academic Achievement,' and we believe that is a worthy title for this decade we're facing."

"When we talk about excellence — and we have to do that at least as much for theological reasons as for academic reasons. Indeed, in the last analysis, there isn't even very much difference between those two at Brigham Young University."

"When we speak of doing better the things we do, we are not yearning for some kind of haughty, self-serving, academic elitism at the BYU of the future. I have spoken very plainly about my desire for phrases like 'The Harvard or the Yale or a Princeton of the West.' We are simply on a frequent track."

"But we are committed to the idea of improvement, committed to a desire to work harder and to do it better. As we have spoken of high expectations, some parents have feared that their students couldn't get in or compete when they got here, and some faculty members have looked forward to the lengthening shadow of a gallows."

"Please don't panic. Our modest hope for the future of 'truth' and 'virtue' around here does not include the invasion of Beirut nor open warfare in a Falklands."

"It's more like a home teacher's personal priest-and-interviewer; where are we now, in matters of 'th' virtus et veritas,' where do we need to be, and how do we get there. It's a lot less bellicose or nighted than some have thought. Home teachers never executed. Well, almost never."

"For example, we've never really said much about here about 'publish or perish.' . . . What I think we are quite willing to be forceful about, however, is something more like 'progress or perish.' I stress again that in so saying I want to be ecological, not theatrical."

"As he came to the presidency of the Church in 1974, President Kimball said quietly and without arrogant intention:

"So much depends on our willingness to make up our minds, collectively and individually, that present levels of performance are not acceptable either to ourselves or to the Lord."

"In saying that, I am not calling for flashy, temporary differences in performance levels but a quiet resolve to do a better job — to lengthen our stride."

"The context from which that line is taken seems very important to the meaning of lengthening one's stride. Making up our minds, collectively and individually, that present levels of performance — whatever they are — 'are not acceptable.' No flashy, temporary sun spots that flare up and die away, but a quiet resolve to do a better job."

" . . . and with buildings, trees, towers, and people in place, we can seriously address the matter of 'excellence in the eighties,' and the nineties — and into the 21st Century."

"Now it's clear that limited resources and unlimited expectations will obviously force us to make some important decisions, not the least of which include who will come here, what they will study, who will teach here and what our special emphasis will be, but we can make those decisions with the help of the Lord."

"But surely every Latter-day Saint can understand our legitimate and necessary efforts toward improvement — a sense of progress, hard work and broader vision. Those are the qualities that have brought the Church out of obscurity and out of darkness. They are precisely the principles that will do the same for the university if we live worthily of it."

"No one — not the students, not the faculty, not the staff, not the administration — no one needs to worry about elitism or arrogance or punishment or punishment. We are just saying to one and all 'make a quiet resolve to do a better job.'"

"President Kimball said at my inauguration: 'It should be obvious to us all that the ultimate future of BYU is partially hidden from our immediate view. Until we have climbed the hills just ahead, we cannot glimpse what lies beyond. And the hills ahead are higher than we think. We cannot be transported over them without meeting demanding challenges.'"

"Such will be your challenge. You will not always be able to see the future, but by drawing close to our Heavenly Father, you will be guided. This is his work. This is his university. You are his servant. You are on his errand . . ."

"Your feet are planted on the right path, and you are headed in the right direction. So academic adjustments as need to be made will be made out of the individual and collective wisdom we find when a dedicated faculty works with a wise administration, an inspired governing Board of Trustees and appreciative and responsive students." ("Installation of and Charge to the President," Pres. Spencer W. Kimball, Nov. 14, 1980.)

"I believe the future for us is worth that effort and those adjustments. The hills ahead undoubtedly are higher than we think, but I hope you will share with me that continued commitment to striving, to making a qualitative reach that does not flee from its unique LDS heritage, but in fact reinforces it, capitalizes on it, underscores it, and holds it forth to the world as 'a light with a special glow.'"

"I'm very conscious that this isn't without some challenges and difficulty, and I want you to understand that we will be responsive to your concerns. If the bumps are ever too abrupt or if there are considerations we seem to have neglected, then I openly invite your counsel on how we can better communicate — and pursue — the goal we share. In trying to move the university forward, we surely do not want to misunderstand nor be misunderstood. But we do need to move forward."

"I have, on occasion, used the homey metaphor of jogging, a subject very close to my heart. If you run a 12-minute mile, it is not great shakes to move to 10 or even 9 minutes with almost minimal effort. The improvement is very visible and it comes in a large block. You can cut your time by one-third or one-fourth with relative ease."

"But to one who is running a sub-four minute mile, every hundredth of a second is brutal and a tenth of a second absolutely crushing. This is life in the fast track and the strain for improvement is marked not in minutes but milliseconds."

"I don't know just where we are as a university on that measured mile. We are not world champions yet, but we've clearly left the 12-minute mile behind. We are somewhere increasingly close to the first-class competition and our improvements in the period ahead may well be more difficult and less dramatically visible than those in the past."

"In any case, it is fine tuning we come closer to now. World-class competition, and that kind of effort can be exhausting."

"But I don't know what other race this university, given its heritage, can run."

"As previous first presidencies have said, we say again to you: 'We expect — we do not merely hope — that Brigham Young University will become a leader among the great universities of the world.' To that expectation I would add: Remain a unique university in all the world. Then, in the process of time, this truly will become the fully recognized university of the Lord about which so much has been spoken in the past."

"Let me say this about being 'a unique university in all the world.' . . . I announced to you last year at this time that as a qualitative measure and a chance to get acquainted, I was planning to visit with every prospective faculty member coming to the university. Except for occasions when I have been out of town, I think I have kept that pledge faithfully."

"I have, usually in the company of the host department chairman, met virtually every prospective faculty member. I don't know of anything that's been more pleasant for me and perhaps nothing that has been more important."

"I have not wanted to presume on anyone else's role there — not on the faculty who might have done the searching and recommending, not on the Academic Vice President's office.

"I do care about those appointments and have wanted to share in those settings just two simple ideas:

"First, that BYU is to become a great university in the very best professional definition of the word. Second, and more important, it is to do so with conspicuous devotion to its latter-day religious heritage. That is really all I've tried to say, though we've spent a little time in each instance to say it. A great university built upon the restored principles of the Gospel of Christ education for eternity."

"The faculty members and staff associates and the students who can believe in and hope for and subscribe to those two inextricably linked aspects of our mission are the men and women we need for excellence in the '80s — and '90s — and 21st century."

"We will do things superbly well, but we will do them our way. Our models are not 'of the world' — not in science, not in art, not in journalism, not in dress or grooming or behavior."

"At BYU we will do things a better way. That is part of the Latter-day Saint legacy of one hundred and seven years at the Brigham Young Academy. That is what those who are new, and certainly what those who are not, must clearly understand. It is at the heart of who and what we are here."

Some victims need cures for cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Growing number of cancer victims are being treated from orthodox medical treatment towards so-called nature res and others "reminiscent of religious rituals," according to a researcher at the University of Pennsylvania Cancer Center.

Dr. Barrie Cassileth, writing in the New England Journal of Medicine, says the unorthodox treatments often involve a variety of special diets, spiritual counseling and treatments administered by nonmedical practitioners.

DO YOU WANT TO FLY?

Face it — you've always wanted to fly! Many of us have had the feeling . . . and for some it has never gone away.

If you have that feeling, then you're in luck. Air Force ROTC Flight Instruction Program (FIP) is available to you if you're designed to teach you the basics of flight through flying lessons in small aircraft of a civilian operated flying school.

The program is an EXTRA for cadets who can qualify to become Air Force pilots through Air Force ROTC. Taken during the senior year in college, FIP is the first step for the cadet who is going on to Air Force jet pilot training after graduation.

This is all reserved for the cadet who wants to get his life off the ground — with Air Force silver pilot wings. Check it out today.

BYU's Steve Young drops behind the protection of the Cougar offensive line. The BYU lines dominated the lines of scrimmage in Georgia, yet the Cougars came up short

'Dawg kick nips Cougars

ATHENS, Ga. — The BYU Cougars invaded Bullock country Saturday and came away with their lives and Georgia's respect. What they didn't leave with was a victory, as Georgia made the plays that counted down the stretch to come from behind and edge BYU 17-14.

With 1:11 remaining in the rain-soaked game, Bulldog sophomore Kevin Butler kicked a 44-yard field goal to climax a 10-point fourth-quarter Georgia turnaround.

The Bulldogs had driven 40 yards in nine plays to set up the winning score. The key play of the drive came when tailback Herschel Walker broke loose for 23 yards and carried the ball into BYU territory.

"He made the run that counted," said Georgia head coach Vince Dooley.

Walker, who gained 124 yards on 31 carries, did not have an immortal afternoon as many had expected. The Cougar defense had much to do with that, as they stymied the Georgia offense for most of the contest.

"They tackled real well," said Walker. "They were doing a lot of gang tackling and that's the sign of a good defense."

The Cougars held quarterback John Lastering to 36 yards passing on 4 of 15 attempts.

On the other hand, Steve Young completed 22 of 16 passes for 285 yards. Young's performance was marred, however, by six interceptions.

Moves ball at outset
The Cougars moved the ball against the Bulldogs from the outset of the game. BYU's first drive ended with kicker Kurt Gunther missing a 42-yard field goal attempt. Georgia got on the board first on a six-play, 34-yard drive following a Jeff Sanchez interception. Fullback Barry Young scored from the 12-yard line to put the Bulldogs up 7-0.

The Bulldog lead was short-lived, however, as cornerback Tom Holmes returned a pass intended for Clarence Kay 63 yards for a touchdown on the first Georgia play following an interception by roverback Tim Bobo.

The game remained tied until Young hit Scott Collie with a 21-yard strike near the close of the third quarter.

Georgia came back to tie the score at 14 on a final-quarter drive during which the "Dawgs converted a key fourth quarter play. The Cougars halted Walker just short of a first down on third and two from BYU's 18 yard line.

Fumble converted
Following a measurement, Lastering dropped the snap and the ball was shuffled beneath a stack of bodies before guard Mike Weaver gained possession with just enough ground to convert the play into a first down.

Four plays later, Walker dived over the line for the tying touchdown.

Cougars dominate
The Cougars dominated the lines of scrimmage, but were victims of the Bulldogs' ability to convert BYU mistakes into scoring drives.

Young had plenty of time to work most of the afternoon as the offensive line kept the vaunted Bulldog rush buried.

"They have a sound offensive line," said Walker. "They are a number-one team."

"They're the best offensive line around," said the man who benefitted the most from the protection, Steve Young.

"I think we almost played to our potential on the line," said tackle Lloyd Eldredge.

"There were very few breakdowns. There shouldn't be a team in the nation who we can't control on the line," Eldredge added. "We proved that today."

Connors pockets fourth title

NEW YORK (AP) — A charged-up Jimmy Connors, ruling the tennis world again at age 30, won his fourth U.S. Open singles championship Sunday by beating Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

The triumph, coupled with his third Wimbledon title in July, gave Connors a sweep of the year's two top tennis tournaments — a feat he first performed in 1974.

What had shaped up to be a tight battle between the top two players in the world — Connors now is No. 1 and Lendl No. 2 on both the ATP and Nixdorf computers, with McEnroe failing to No. 3 — almost became a rout.

After the first game, Lendl was unable to break Connors again until the sixth game of the third set, when his powerful forehand returned. And Lendl had to fight the entire match to hold serve.

Besides the breaks he suffered, on three other occasions Connors took Lendl to duce before the Czech pulled out his own serve.

Lendl double-faulted his first point after the opening-game break and dropped to a love-40 deficit before fighting back to duce. But Connors prevailed when after the second duce, Lendl netted a forehand, then hit a forehand wide.

The two then held serve easily until the sixth game, when Connors broke Lendl at 30. Lendl double-faulted to 30-40 and Connors closed out the game when Lendl's backhand down the line was wide.

Connors held serve to clinch the opening set, then immediately broke Lendl to take the advantage in the second set. He broke him again in the seventh game as he raced out to a two-set lead.

'Other' Cougar team falls to Aztecs

By SCOTT TAYLOR
Staff Writer

The BYU football team was not the only Cougar team to fall short of defeating a nationally-ranked opponent last weekend.

A late second-half rally by the BYU Soccer team fell short as they lost to No. 2 San Diego State 2-1 on a rain-soaked Haws Field on Friday.

The loss evened BYU's record to 2-2-1. The Aztecs posted their second win against no losses.

After falling behind 2-0 during the first 45 minutes of play, BYU modified its game plan and quickly opened up the offensive attack following the second-half kickoff.

Sparked by Tony Villalba and Guillermo Rodriguez, who scored BYU's only goal during the second half, the Cougars were able to control the tempo of the final 45 minutes with crisp passes and constant scoring threats.

When asked if the second half had been controlled by the BYU surge or a cautious Aztec defense, San Diego State Coach Chuck Clegg conceded that "BYU dominated it."

What BYU didn't dominate was the first half, as the Aztecs scored two easy goals in the first 16 minutes of play.

The halftime score of 2-0 could have been even more lopsided, but repeated offensive attacks were thwarted by a cautious BYU defensive formation, goal-saving stops by goalie Garth Baker and many misdirected Aztec shots. BYU failed to take a serious scoring shot in the first half.

Urged on by several different accents and international dialects of an estimated 250 fans, the Soccer team came out of the stadium in the second half. Although surprised and somewhat confused by the change in tactics by BYU, the Aztecs tried to continue their assault on the BYU goal.

Still able to occasionally pierce BYU's defense, Aztec forwards found their second-half shots frequently scooped up by Baker, who sacrificed himself and the protection of the goal area by charging out to meet the Aztec offensive threats head-on.

Baker said goal-tending pressures were lessened by the defensive play of backs Juan Mina, Renato Domaredzky and Drew Lasker.

Mina, Domaredzky and Lasker were most effective in the later stages of the game as they got the ball out of BYU territory and into scoring position for the forwards.

BYU Coach Savvy "Jim" Dumas was pleased with his team's performance against the favored Aztec squad and admitted holding the team back in defensive formations.

WAC-action roundup

CSU drops Pokes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It rained on Colorado State's parade, but no amount of moisture could dampen the joy in the Ram locker room.

CSU snapped a 14-game losing streak (dating back to 1980 with a 9-3 upset of Wyoming in the rain in Fort Collins on Saturday, Terry Nugent hit Jeff Ralikes on a 55-yard scoring pass in the second quarter and the Ram defense continually beat back Wyoming scoring efforts in the second half.

"Christmas came early, and what a great present," said the Rams' first-year coach, Leon Fuller. "I can't tell you how good I feel. We've been talking about this for a long time."

Nugent, who suffered through CSU's 0-12 season a year ago, said, "I think I can speak for all the players in saying that this win is the best ever. Things had gotten pretty bad here. We had heard about being in the bottom 10 and being ranked as the worst team in the country, and we had heard the jokes. We could laugh about it, but deep down it hurt. We wanted to do something about it."

And what better time than against Wyoming, CSU's bitterest rival. "We hate Wyoming, but it was a controlled hate," said Nugent.

The loss dropped Wyoming, considered a title contender at the start of the season, to 0-2 in WAC play. "Realistically, we're out of the race," said Cowboy coach Al Kinsie.

In another mild upset in WAC football Saturday, Air Force continued its mastery of San Diego State, routing the Aztecs 44-32 at the academy.

Those results left a surprising twist at the top of the WAC standings—CSU, AFA and New Mexico, all with 1-0 league records. New Mexico shut out Texas Tech 14-0 in Albuquerque in a non-league game Saturday night. In other non-league affairs, BYU bowed to No. 6 Georgia 17-14 in Athens, UTEP was routed by second-ranked Washington 55-0 in Seattle, Utah fell to 15th-ranked Arizona State 29-10 in Tempe and Hawaii opened its season with a 40-0 thrashing of Montana in Honolulu.

Gilder wins Boston title

SUTTON, Mass. (AP)—Veteran Bob Gilder charged into the lead with birdies on the 60th and 61st holes and outdistanced the field with steady pressure golf the rest of the way Sunday for a two-stroke victory in the $300,000 Bank of Boston Classic.

Gilder fired a final-round 67 for a 72-hole score of 271, 13-under par, at steamy Pleasant Valley Country Club, for his third PGA victory this year and his fifth in seven years on the pro tour.

In winning $54,000 and moving into sixth place on the prize money list, with $256,308 this year, Gilder edged Fuzzy Zoeller by two strokes.

Another stroke back and tied at 10-under-par 274 were Gil Morgan and third-round leader Mike McCullough. Then, at 275, 9-under par, were Brad Bryant, Ed Sneed, David Graham, Peter Jacobsen and John Cook.

Gilder, 31, a native of Corvallis, Ore., began the day two strokes behind McCullough, who had a 54-hole total of 292. Gilder broke out of a four-way tie, which included McCullough, Zoeller and George Archer, with a birdie on the sixth green, putting him 11-under par for the tournament.

Karin Knudsen, a junior from Oxnard, Calif., prepares to slam a spike against Ohio State in Friday night's volleyball game. The BYU women's volleyball team beat the Buckeyes, running its record to 20.

BYU beats OSU, ups record to 3-0

The BYU women's volleyball team led its season record to 3-0 by routing Ohio State in four games before an enthusiastic crowd in the Fieldhouse on Friday night. The Cougars downed the Buckeyes 12-15, 12-15 and 13-7. Ohio State, which is on an eight-match tour of the Rocky Mountain area, jumped to an early 9-3 lead in the first game of the match, but the Cougars poured in a point and never looked back. "I have to feel pleased with our performance tonight," Coach Elaine Stratford said. "We didn't play like we did last week, but this team is a lot better than the last. Ohio State finished second in the Ten last year," she said.

Michaelis attributed the Cougars' win to the consistency of their complex offense.

"You know your offense is good when you have such big holes to hit to as we did tonight," Michaelis said.

Michaelis added that a big reason for the success of the offense in the game was the setting of Valerie de Pourtales, a 5-9 senior from Villa Park, Calif.

"Valerie did a great job of setting, giving the hitters lots of options," Michaelis said.

Michaelis had to give credit to the Buckeyes, though, for digging many balls that might have fallen to the floor.

"They were a scrappy team. They served well and hit to our weaknesses," Michaelis said.

Church' restarts tonight

FEW YORK AP—The Pittsburgh Steelers' Monday Night Football game on Friday night, the Dallas Cowboys' prime time tonight, the "Rev" of the church of Monday night Football opens season with a holy field in a Santa Barbara, Calif., tavern. The "Three Wise Men" in the ABC press will call the plays. "Rev" and his three "Guys" will baptize a few new members, some "secularists" who generally try to serve the church's Commandment: Thou shalt keep play night holy—no fun in early sports fans are a delusion, and more than million television on average, tuned last year to at least of ABC's prime-time football games, has posted their best ever, the network here are other fan clubs, but for three years the Church of Monday Night Football has been one of the more devoted sects. It has set up "parishes" in about 15 taverns and has signed 4,000 or so members, from as far away as Guam and Saskatchewan.

"It's a real camaraderie thing," says club founder Richard Slade, whom church members know simply as "The Rev."

"We feel people spend too much time watching football on Sunday. That's why we have our church on Monday

NFL weekend roundup

Raiders whip 49ers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
SAN FRANCISCO — Jim Plunkett tossed a go-ahead touchdown pass in the final period and rookie Marcus Allen rushed for 116 yards as the Los Angeles Raiders, in their first National Football League game, beat the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers 23-17 Sunday.

Until this season the Raiders played across the bay in Oakland.

Plunkett's 3-yard scoring pass to tight end Todd Christensen, former BYU fullback, with 9:14 left in the game wiped out a 17-13 San Francisco lead. Chris Bahr kicked his third field goal, a 43-yarder, four minutes later after 49ers quarterback Joe Montana lost a fumble.

Allen, the Heisman Trophy winner from Southern Cal, scored the Raiders' first touchdown on a 3-yard run late in the first half. Bahr's first two field goals were from 41 and 42 yards out.

Redskins 37, Eagles 34
PHILADELPHIA — Mark Moseley's 26-yard field goal 4:47 into overtime gave the Washington Redskins a 37-34 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles on Sunday.

Moseley, who sent the game into overtime with a 48-yard field goal as regulation time went, kicked his winner after Joe Theismann had completed passes of 28 and 27 yards to tight end Art Monk on Washington's only overtime possession. Philadelphia lost the toss and never got its hands on the ball in the extra period.

Packers 35, Rams 23
MILWAUKEE — Lynn Dickey rifled two fourth-quarter touchdown passes 17 seconds apart to cap a Green Bay rally as the Packers surged to a 35-23 victory over the Los Angeles Rams. Dickey hit tight end Paul Coffman with a 10-yard pass with 11:12 to play, moments after linebacker Guy Prattner recovered a Robert Alexander fumble on a kick return. The TD gave the Packers a 28-23 lead.

It came on the heels of a 15-yard scoring pass from Dickey to James Lofton as the Packers came out to within 23-21 of the Rams, who led 23-0 at half-time.

Dickey overcame a brilliant Los Angeles debut for quarterback Bert Jones, who completed 17 of 31 passes for 202 yards and one touchdown.

Falcons 16, Giants 14
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Mick Luckhurst booted a 29-yard field goal with 58 seconds remaining, lifting the Atlanta Falcons to a 16-14 victory over the New York Giants.

Atlanta closed in on the Giants when safety Bob Glazebrook picked up a final-quarter fumble by Leon Perry on the Falcons' 9-yard line and ran it back 91 yards for a touchdown, an Atlanta record for a fumble recovery.

Giants quarterback Scott Brunner threw for a career-best 310 yards, including 33- and 19-yard touchdown passes to Earnest Gray.

Lions 17, Bears 10
PONTIAC, Mich. — Detroit tailback Billy Sims, who just ended a six-week holdout, played sparingly but still managed 33 yards in 13 carries and scored on a 3-yard run to spark the Lions' 17-10 victory over the Chicago Bears.

Chargers 23, Broncos 3
DENVER — Rolf Benirschke kicked three field goals and Dan Fouts passed 18 yards to Scott Fitzkee for a touchdown as the San Diego Chargers rolled to a 23-3 victory over the turnover-plagued Denver Broncos on Sunday.

As a light rain fell throughout most of the game, the Broncos suffered six turnovers, four of them in San Diego territory, including former Utah State fullback Kick Parros' fumble into the end zone after the Broncos had reached the San Diego 3-yard line with 5:28 left in the game.

Dolphins 15, Jets 28
NEW YORK — Miami's Tommy Vigorito scored on a 50-yard punt return and cornerback Ken McNeal and safety Glenn Blackwood returned interceptions for touchdowns Sunday to lead the Miami Dolphins to a 45-28 victory over the mistake-prone New York Jets.

The victory ended four years of frustration against the Jets for the Dolphins, who were 0-7-1 during that span.

Vigorito's punt return with 10:47 remaining in the first quarter broke a 7-7 tie, and the Dolphins steadily built on their lead. One of Miami's scores came on a rare touchdown reception by quarterback David Woodley, who hauled in a 15-yard pass from halfback Tony Nathan in the third quarter.

Bengals 17, Oilers 6
CINCINNATI — Ken Anderson passed for two touchdowns and ran for another Sunday, and Cincinnati's defense shut down Houston's offense for three quarters as the Bengals mauled the Oilers 17-6 in the season opener for the American Football Conference Central Division rivals.

Anderson, the NFL's Most Valuable Player last season, completed 29 of 40 passes for 354 yards without an interception as the defending American Conference champions took a 17-0 halftime lead and added a pair of third-quarter touchdowns.

Lloyd shines in U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd, displaying patience from the baseline and capitalizing on her opponent's errors, won her sixth U.S. Open Tennis singles championship Saturday, trouncing Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-1.

It was the second time in three years the two had met in the final of America's premiere tennis tournament, and the second time Lloyd has prevailed.

Lloyd, who had to go three sets to top Mandlikova in the final here two years ago, only had to keep the ball in play Saturday as her 20-year-old opponent made numerous errors and several crucial double faults.

The 27-year-old Lloyd took home the $90,000 first-place prize and became the third woman in history to capture the U.S. title six times. Only Molla Mallory, who won eight times between 1915 and 1926, and Helen Wills Moody, who captured seven crowns between 1923 and 1931, have won more.

The victory kept alive Lloyd's streak of winning at least one Grand Slam singles title each year since 1974, and increased her record to 66 match victories.

Mandlikova collected $45,000 for her runner-up finish.

Lloyd struggled constantly to hold serve, but always came up with the big points when she needed them. She never lost serve, although three times Mandlikova headed to deuce.

Washington leads Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Claudell Washington lined a two-out, two-run ninth-inning single off reliever Ben Hayes to give the Atlanta Braves a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds on Sunday.

Braves walk
Trailing 3-2, the Braves began their game-winning ninth-inning rally when Bob Horner led off with a walk off Red starter Greg Harris, 2-6. Albert Hall ran for Horner and went to second when Jerry Royster sacrificed the runners to second. Bruce Benedict was tionally walked to load the base. Matt Sinatro ran for him.

Washington knocked in He Royster with a single in front of Milner in right field.

Washington No. 1, says UTEP coach

The folks in Pittsburgh like to say that "Pitt is it" — that is, No. 1 in the college football rankings — but Texas-El Paso Coach Bill Yung has a different opinion.

Yung and his Miners ran into second-ranked Washington on Saturday and were swamped 55-0. Two days earlier, No. 1-rated Pitt nipped fifth-ranked North Carolina in a sloppily played, penalty-filled contest.

"I'm not knocking the other team (Pitt)," Yung said, "but I saw Washington do a lot more things than I saw the other team do on TV the other night."

For the most part, the favorites prevailed on the first big weekend of the season. The biggest shocker was unranked West Virginia's come-from-behind 41-27 upset of No. 9 Oklahoma, while the only other member of The Associated Press Top Twenty to bite the dust was 10th-ranked Southern California, a 17-9 loser to No. 11 Florida.

Third-ranked Nebraska and No. 4 Alabama beat up on teams which upset them in their openers a year ago.

President Ronald Reagan addresses large crowd in tiny Hooper, Utah, Volunteer Picnic for Utah Republicans. Earlier in the day, Reagan toured the Ogden LDS cannery and praised the principle of self-help, saying, "It's an idea that once characterized our nation."

Reagan tells Ogden crowd

Reward for honest toil' necessary for America

STEVE EATON Senior Reporter President Ronald Reagan told an estimated 12,000 Utahns at a Republican rally in Ogden on Friday that the nation needs to reward the principles of honest toil.

He also reaffirmed his support of prayer in schools and a balanced budget amendment, and again stated his opposition to abortion.

Organizers said an unexpected number of people flooded the tiny, unincorporated town.

ity of Hooper and waited for hours in the rain for a chance to see Reagan.

"Frankly, the weather probably saved the thing from becoming unmanageable," Chuck Akerlow, chairman of the Utah Republican Party, said. "As it was, there were probably 5,000 or 6,000 people who couldn't get in. They were lined up all the way out to the freeway, and the freeway was jammed."

Reagan told the receptive crowd of his most recent defeat in the nation's capital. The president lost the battle to shut down a $14.2 billion supplemental spending bill by one vote when the Senate overrode his veto of the bill Friday.

Reagan had sent Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, back to Washington to support his veto, but the effort proved fruitless. "They (Congress) had better practice at that because they are going to get a chance to do that every time they send an appropriation down that is over the budget — I am going to veto it again," Reagan said.

Reagan went to a Republican picnic after he toured the LDS Church's welfare cannery in Ogden with President Gordon B. Hinckley, a counselor in the First Presidency. During the tour, Reagan answered several reporters' questions about Congressional problems, then detoured reporters'

Ethics in athletics topic of new play

An original play that examines some basic questions about human conduct within the high-pressure world of major college football will open the 1982-83 Margetts Arena Theater season Thursday.

Eric Samuelson's "Playing the Game," which won first prize in the playwriting division of last year's Mayhew Creative Writing Competition at BYU, will run Thursday through Saturday, Sept. 21-23 and 28-30, and Oct. 1 at 8 p.m., with a 1:30 p.m. matinee Sept. 27. All performances will be in the Margetts Arena Theater.

The drama focuses on a football player, who is also an English major, at a major university.

"He became interested in English after being challenged by a fine teacher," said Director James Van Leishout, a candidate for a master's degree in fine arts in directing at BYU. "He's not an excellent student, but he's doing well."

"Eventually, he is caught in a crunch between the big state game and a paper that is due for the professor," Van Leishout explains.

The student is pressured into buying a paper from a girl who works for a "paper mill," a business that writes and sells themes and essays to college students, he adds.

Integrity

"It's a play about integrity," he says. "By the end of the show we have observed the full repercussions of the student's actions."

Samuelson has had one other Margetts Theatre production, "Letter from a Prophet," co-written with BYU faculty member Charles Metten.

The author first became interested in writing "Playing the Game" while attending a course at BYU taught by author and playwright Orson Scott Card.

"Scott mentioned during the class that there has never been a really good play about the problems of a college football player," Samuelson said.

"He turned to me and said, 'You ought to write that play.'"

Samuelson finished his first draft one and one-half weeks later and, encouraged by Card, later submitted it to the Mayhew Competition.

"Scott really did wonder for me as a playwright," he says. "He really helped me focus on what writing is."

While he has never played football himself, Samuelson is, by his own admission, "a sports nut."

Dedicated fan

"Basically I'm just a truly dedicated football fan," he adds.

"A close friend of mine was a high school All-American and a starting quarterback at a major university. I based one of the characters in the play on him."

Van Leishout views the play as very timely, considering the opening of football season and the adverse publicity regarding recruiting and ethics many major college sports programs across the country have received.

"But the play runs much deeper than athletics," he said. "Sports is just the medium Eric has chosen. It's about talent and those who receive special, preferential treatment because of that talent."

Samuelson agrees. "Author Norman Mailer says society has to take responsibility for someone with extraordinary talent," he said. "I take issue with that idea in the play."

Van Leishout and Samuelson have been working for several months on polishing and refining the script.

Script notes

"After our first read-through last winter, we both had a page and a half of notes on the script," Van Leishout said. "Since then, Eric's given a richer, more definite direction to an already fine script."

"I've done about a 35-percent rewrite over the summer to give a little more focus to the characters," Samuelson admits. "With an original script, you've got to be prepared for pretty extensive rewrites all the way through the rehearsal period."

Samuelson said he now feels the play has a good script that examines some of the basic questions of human conduct within the world of college football.

Portraying major roles in the production are Ken Beck and L. Susan Lewis, with Jamie Dispore, Allen Ririe Stark, Bret Val Liljenquist, Laura Wardle, David Christiansen and Keith Stepp in supporting roles.

Tickets for the play can be purchased at the theater ticket office, HFAC.

White becomes 'singing Cowboy'

DALLAS (AP)—Danny White of the Dallas Cowboys has joined the list of singing quarterbacks.

White's first album, which includes such favorites as "Let It Be Me" and "You Are A Part of Me," is to be released this fall.

Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who will be White's rival in a National Football League season opener tonight, has made several albums.

White is the second singing Cowboy quarterback. Don Meredith, who will be a commentator on the ABC Monday night television game between Dallas and Pittsburgh, earlier recorded "Travelin' Man" and "Them That Ain't Got It Can't Lose."

White's first effort, called "Country Cowboy," started with a whim. White, who plays the piano, is also vice president of Grand Prix Records in Memphis. A few months ago, company President Ed Dubaj suggested he cut an album.

"If Terry Bradshaw can do it, why can't I?" White said.

Utah murder victim subject of new book

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP)—In the seven years it took Gary Kinder to complete his first book, he courted poverty in this haven of the wealthy while his more prosperous friends acquired luxury cars.

But Kinder's long labor to produce a detailed portrait of a Utah family scarred by torture and killing finally has ended with publication of "Victim: The Other Side of Murder."

At an end, too, is Kinder's life as an impoverished writer. The film rights alone went for six figures, although he won't name the numbers.

"For a long time people who knew me said I was taking too long to write this book," said Kinder, 35, who came here after graduation from a Florida law school. He worked nights as a busboy, bartender and bellman; anything to keep his days free to write.

"You have to understand that during that seven years, I watched all of my friends become prosperous attorneys who literally were driving Mercedes' in downtown Miami," said Kinder, a Ft. Lauderdale native.

Still, he never seriously considered abandoning the book.

"A lot of the reason it took so long was that I was a novice," Kinder said. Another reason was a somewhat belated decision to focus his book on a survivor of the grisly Hi-Fi Shop murders rather than on the convicted killers.

Courtney Naisbitt was a 16-year-old high school sophomore in 1974 when he, his mother and three others were herded into the basement of the Shop in Ogden, forced to drink a cyanide cleaner and the head.

Three of the victims — including Naisbitt's mother and an 18-year-old girl who was — died of their wounds. One of the survivors had a bullet point in his head.

'Cherry Boone writes book on anorexia

SEATTLE (AP) — In the serene her sophisticated suburban living an outside Bethell, not far from tattle, beautiful Cherry Boone Neill, 28, is playing with her beautiful baby, Brittany, who is 10 months

Framed album covers on the wall is the only sign that she is Pat one's daughter, the one who nearly died in a land of plenty.

"I'm one of the all-too-few who recover from anorexia nervosa," she says softly.

The bizarre disease of dieters kills most 20 percent of its estimated 11 million victims today, O'Neill says. Only a third of the survivors recover completely, like Cherry, who can now eat normally.

Form of suicide

She spent the month of June in her ring room frantically scribbling the chapters of her book about involuntary starvation that doctors call "a sophisticated form of suicide."

"Starving for Attention" is due out November from Continuum. Some of the illustrations show her at the pth of her disease, thinner than a chautau survivor and no longer able to ep food in her body. There is no semblance to today's glowing young matron in the spigged lavender dress, giving a bottle to her alert ughter in lavender rompers.

Going public

"We decided to go public with her y," her husband of seven years, in O'Neill, says, "because frantic people are always calling us just be themselves about anorexia."

When Cherry and Dan were married in 1975, the bride was 21 and her 19-year-old sister, who had anorexia, was touring with the Boone family act at her parents' request, settling to marriage and aiming at perfection in that always danced just outside r grasp.

One night the sense of chronic failure became too much. She took 60 active pills and the lethal teen-age y was on again.

"Overnight I became someone who poked like a cadaver, the skin etched tight over my bones. Dan id I wasn't the same person."

Near death

Cherry soon lay near death at 80 ounds — still feeling fat — in a Los Angeles hospital where no one understood anorexia. She could eat, but she sat throw up — and no one could eeat that.

At this point O'Neill, a Seattle-area utive, intervened to bring her north Seattle psychiatrist Raymon Bath, ho was acquainted with anorexia edelivered in family therapy.

"Dan had to see he couldn't peruate Daddy's authoritarian approach," O'Neill says. "He couldn't der me to eat. He had to love me ough to let me live my own life, en if I was going to kill myself. And ad to see I was trying to die before could make the decision to live."

As the eldest of four Boone daughters, Cherry had been on her parents' father since the age of five. She d her sisters led a life in which noing was left to chance in Pat and ilyn Boone's desire to keep the mily in the limelight but out of the rm that Hollywood can do, their ughter says now.

First diet

She went on her first diet at 16 be-ase she weighed 140 pounds — and was intolerable in an on-stage ster of beautiful daughters. Praised for her success, she idn't stop practicing the first thing d'd ever discovered that she could o for herself.

When her weight dropped to 92 ounds, her parents intervened, iding her to a doctor who ordered r to gain weight or go to a hospital. Not in her recovery, food is no iger an issue, she says. After the chiatric treatment, the O'Neills rked two years in Hawaii for uth with a Mission, a Christian ay.

They came to Seattle in early 1980, ere Dan runs a worldwide umental "Save the Refugees nt"

Sandy Gray, manager of the BYU costume shop, is already hard at work sewing the costumes for "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," which will be presented in October. Gray and 12 seamstresses make all of the costumes for the plays performed at BYU. They will provide costumes for seven performances this semester. Some productions require costumes that span a period of 40 years.

Costume-shop manager creates variety of clothing

By STEPHANIE SPELLMAN

Asst. Entertainment Editor
Amid sewing machines, spools of thread, mirrors, dressing rooms and mannequins lies the artistic talent of BYU's costume-shop manager, Sandy Gray.

"It is a very creative and high-pressure job," Gray said. "The high pressure comes from meeting the deadlines for opening nights." Gray said running the BYU costume shop involves working closely with Janet Swenson, designer of about two-thirds of the costumes. "We talk about the show and I make sure the costumes get made the way she wants them," Gray said.

Gray said she began working in the costume shop as a seamstress while a student at BYU. One summer, the position of manager of the costume shop opened up and she was offered the position by Swenson.

Gray said she decided to go into costume making because of the creative challenge.

"I enjoy working with my hands and the challenge of thinking of new things," she said.

Time periods

Part of the creative outlet of costume making, Gray said, is the variety of time periods with which the costume shop works.

"We can work anywhere from the pre-biblical period to the fantasy period," she said.

Gray said the costume shop first enters the picture in a production when the director meets with the costume designer to discuss ideas for costume making.

The designer then researches the time period and makes sketches of the proposed costumes, Gray said. "These sketches are taken to me, and I begin the actual process of assembling the garment," she said.

"We make patterns for some costumes, if we need to, and then we shop and purchase the fabrics," she said.

"The actor's first duty is to come in for measuring," Gray said. "After that they usually have three to four fittings to come in for."

Gray said her 12 seamstresses, all students, are mostly clothing and textile majors. She also has one full-time staff member.

"Although I supervise all productions, I like to have a project or two to be working on myself," she said.

Men's clothing

Gray said she prefers to tailor men's clothing. "I like working with the wool and making it look nice. I have learned a lot about men's tailoring — maybe I just trust myself with their clothing more than I do women's," Gray said.

Although the techniques used in ques used on the inside of garments show it on the outside. "The fitting and looks of the garment show the technique," she said.

Lighting

Lighting and the audience's distance from the stage affect most costumes' looks, Gray said.

"We had colorful costumes sewn for 'Anne Get Your Gun,' but we noticed at a dress rehearsal that the lighting director had put in the wrong colored lights, which made the costumes look gray. At that point, we had to stop and change the lights and costumes," she said.

Gray said the most challenging show to make costumes for since she has been with BYU has been "The Merchant of Venice."

"We had to build at least 30 costumes from nothing, plus the chorus' costumes had to be pulled from stock and altered," she said.

Another challenging play, Gray said, was "A Christmas Carol."

"We had Brad Loman, a guest designer from Hollywood, design the costumes," Gray said.

"The challenge was not only in creating the costumes, but also in working with the designer," she said.

Two shifts

"We had the shop open 12 hours a day with two shifts of seamstresses, sewing men's and women's garments are the same, Gray said, the techni-

"Die Fledermaus" required 26 ball gowns," Gray said.

Working with Gray is her accountant, who keeps the costume shop within its budget, and a "clean-up and repairs person," Gray said.

There are also the designer and seamstresses, whom Gray says are usually women.

Gray said she has had men sew for her in the past. "My accountant sews. He's very good with accessories such as hats."

Seamsters

"I'm not afraid to hire guys to sew at all," Gray said, "if they have the qualifications. I've had some very excellent male seamsters before."

This month begins a hectic schedule of making costumes, Gray said. Within the 16-week semester, seven plays are being produced, she said.

"We have three main-stage shows in the Purdue Theater as well as three arena shows, and then one opera in December in the Provo Tabernacle," Gray said.

During this time, Gray said, the shop relies on costumes in storage as much as possible.

Gray said special costumes, such as break-away costumes, have been made in the shop before.

"The play, 'I Do, I Do,' spans 40 years, so a lot of quick costume changes were needed. Velero is used so the costumes can easily be taken off and put on," Gray said.

Gray cited an instance when a bathrobe had to be ripped off an actress. Velero was used down the length of the back of the bathrobe so that could be done, Gray said.

Costuming effects are sometimes written in the script, Gray said.

script, he and the author sat together in the doctor's office. The moment was charged with emotion.

"I told him I wanted to set up a trust fund for Cortney," based on a percentage of the book and film rights, Kinder recalls. "It was the most touching moment of my life, I think. He said, 'I really, honestly, sincerely appreciate that,' and he accepted every word."

Cortney Naisbitt, now 24, works with computers at Hill Air Force Base and considers his father his best friend. He retained no memory of the night of mayhem and learned the details only this year.

"Over the years I decided the real story was with the victims," said Kinder, who nevertheless exchanged more than 200 letters with Selby and interviewed him numerous times at Utah State Prison.

They had a falling out in 1980 when Kinder — who traveled twice to Selby's native Trinidad to research his background — refused to sign over 10 percent of the proceeds from the book.

But long before that, Dr. Byron H. Naisbitt, Cortney's father, had become upset at hearing Kinder was writing a book about Selby. He summoned the writer to a face-to-face meeting, where Kinder convinced him of the need for victims of crime to tell their story. The obstetrician finally consented.

"Any writer would assume the victims would not want to talk about it," Kinder said. But he hadn't reckoned on Naisbitt, who ultimately emerged as the book's central figure.

"He's a very charismatic man," Kinder said. "He is a hero. Intelligent people would feel that he actually willed his son to live."

Last January, after the elder Naisbitt had read the finished manu-

President gets ticket during visit

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Police Chief Joe Ritchie said someone — apparently an Ogden police officer — put a parking ticket on President Reagan's limousine Friday morning outside the hotel where Reagan was staying and signed Ritchie's name to it.

Ritchie said a Secret Service agent found the ticket on the car, which was legally parked in a private lot next to the Hilton Hotel, Reagan's overnight stop Thursday during his two-day visit to Utah.

"One of my officers felt it was funny to put that parking ticket on the president's limousine and attach my name to it," Ritchie said in a telephone interview from his home.

"The only thing is, I don't think it was funny," Ritchie said he didn't know who committed the prank, but planned to investigate and punish whoever was involved.

"We'll take whatever disciplinary action we think is proper at that time," he said.

"I don't know right now what that will be," Ritchie said he didn't see the ticket, but was told it cited the limousine for overtime parking. It included the president's name, but listed his White House address as 2525 Pennsylvania Ave., instead of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. and had Ritchie's bogus signature.

"I understand that a Secret Service agent has the ticket," Ritchie said.

"He said the president sometimes finds these things comical and he planned to give it to the president. I don't know whether he did or not."

Up to its bumper without a paddle, this Volkswagen Rabbit experiences the all-wet weather of Utah. Friday's rainstorm brought from 1 to 1.75 inches of rain to the valley, but the Olmstead Power Plant at the mouth of Provo Canyon received 2 inches in the deluge that flooded streets and caused a water line in Provo to break, forcing residents to boil drinking water through Saturday. Sunday snow accumulated at the 6,000 foot level.

Laughing matter...

which the joke is based arises from an apparent verbal accident, but the joke is too witty because the jokesman artistically contrives several kinds of comparisons and contrasts.

Through all of these gropings for definitions of humor, wit and the comic, I have kept trying to find the words incongruity and incongruous. Incongruity is the discrepancy between what someone thinks he is and what he really is. The tensions caused by incongruity, by appearance battling against reality, are the foundation of humor, wit, the essence of the laughable, of the comic spirit.

Cartoonists thrive on incongruity. Some of you will recall the classic Calvin Grondahl cartoon in a Universe of several years ago. In the cartoon, a BYU male is seen rising, cut and bleeding, from a pile of rocks, all of which have obviously been thrown at him. He says to the BYU Security Police as they come to his assistance, "all I said was, 'Let him who is without sin cast the first stone.'" The evident incongruity here attacks self-righteousness, a sad form of affectation.

Strictly speaking, wit and humor are really another means of taking life seriously. Wit and humor teach, assert, proclaim and subtly call for reform. That's why Mark Twain wrote that "there is no lasting quality to humor unless it's based on real substance."

Twain insisted that "humor must not professedly teach, and it must not professedly preach, but it must do both if it will live forever."

But Twain went one step too far. He insisted that the incongruities of humor are based only in man's sorrowful condition. "Everything human is pathetic," he observed; "the secret source of humor is not joy but sorrow. There is no humor in heaven."

I think he was wrong because I think he had the wrong idea about heaven. If humor is based largely in incongruities fostered by society, I shout "Hurrah for the Mormon heaven," where the "same sociality" exists as on earth.

I see some distinctive possibilities for humor in the Mormon heaven — possibilities for a lofty, Celestial, middle-brow Terrestrial, and downright earthy Terrestrial variety. Think about the witty bon mots of haughty Celestial types as they jest about ... the length of Fast Sundays when a day is as a thousand years; or the joys of eternal motherhood, and eternal (and numberless) mothers-in-law.

In the heavens are there to be no incongruities? — the thought makes reason stare; just knowing we're forever tells me there'll be humor there!

But whether in the heavens or here on earth, humor must be kept in its proper perspective. Humor's, after all, only one of many ways of viewing life. . . . Urging the Latter-day Saints to avoid "excess of laughter," to remember the solemnities of eternity, the Lord, speaking particularly of our conduct on Sabbath, asks that we cultivate cheerful hearts and countenances, "not with much laughing, for this is sin, but with a glad heart," (D&C 59:15).

Certainly, as Elder Bruce R. McConkie has written, "Joyful laughter meets with divine approval, and when properly engaged in, it is wholesome and edifying."

As I have already indicated, it is difficult to classify wit and humor. Let's just say, by way of offering some loose categories, that incongruity in the use of words, of situations, of ideas, and of character seems to cover the whole morass. Let's look at a few examples of each of these four categories to wrap up this ordeal by verbal abuse:

"Word-humor" is probably the earliest recorded humor, the walls of caves being what they are. Word humor relies on word-play, on the banter of tongue-slips, on double-meanings, rhyme, rhythm and alliteration. From puns to tongue-twisters to nonsense verse, word play demands keen attention to subtle or not-so-subtle incongruities of meaning; it also demands an appreciative audience.

Probably the best-known word-humor is the maligned but benign pun. Each of you out there has, in ignorance, hissey and boomed when a brilliant associate has waxed punny, that the pun is becoming an endangered species. You respond so because your high school English teacher, who should have been consigned to physics, or gym coaching, failed to understand that the pun is among the highest forms of humor, not the lowest.

Your hisses and boos, springing from intolerance and misunderstanding, are in reality public acknowledgements of your momentary superiority. You got the pun so it must be dumb. Nonsense! Puns are wonderful; they give the listener a needed sense of fleeting superiority and they give the punster a sense of deftness and adroitness which makes his day — and, what's even better, puns give the uncomprehending numbskull well-deserved and spiritually cleansing humiliation.

Most puns are merely wise, straightforward, and wonderful.

"The jugglers are going to claw the Utes to pieces," she purred cattily.

Another form of word play is the whacky definitions.

It is, of course, only one staggered step from the pun to the grand art of nonsense verse. Consider this one by Ogden Nash:

Reflections on Babies:

"A bit of talcum
Is always welcome."

If word-humor depends upon the incongruity of words and their several possible meanings, the second kind of humor, situational humor, depends less on words and more on the ludicrous nature of comic situations. Situational humor is the absent-minded history professor with the broken zipper, the contact lens in the toilet bowl.

The third category, the humor of ideas, may rely on word play or on situations, but it is wittier, more artistic, more aware of the social incongruities, more judgmental. While the joke is the most popular conveyor of the humor of ideas, cartoons also belong to the genre. I like Calvin Grondahl's cartoons. His two works, "The Freeway to Perfection" and "Faith-Promoting Rumors," along with Orson Scott Card's memorable "Saltspies: The Mormon Dictionary," seem to be sitting on everyone's Provo Table, a little to the left of the standard works, and not quite so dusty. Card's hilarious definitions in "Saltspies" are not puns or word humor, but are the humor of ideas. Note the incongruities reflected in these definitions:

"Home Teacher: Two priesthood holders who are responsible for making sure you cannot watch the end of the TV program you have been waiting all month to see."

Such definitions illustrate the tendency of the humor of ideas to engage in social commentary.

The humor of character, our fourth and final category, is, perhaps, the ultimate humor, because it is us. Each of us at some time is funny in some way, but some of us are funnier than others. Each of us, faculty excepted, can get a touch pompous, proud, hypocritical, vain, or just plain stupid.

At such times we need the cleansing purgative of humor. Indeed, it is often best to laugh at ourselves first, before we give others a crack at us.

We chuckle at the character humor provided by the words of Elder J. Golden Kimball, who, on being asked by some barbarian if he intended to be funny in his conference sermon, said, "No, I don't. I don't expect to at all. But they laugh at me anyway. I don't know why. I say what the others say. Now take Apostle Ballard. He can get up and say, 'Brethren and sisters, I haven't prepared a sermon today. What I'm going to say is the Lord's name. And then he'll preach 'em a fine sermon. I get up and say the same thing: 'God only knows what I'm going to tell you, and they all laugh.'"

Such is the humor of character. And we're grateful for it!

mind," he said. "More than 1 million unborn children every year are being denied the right to life, and I think it is time that we decide that unless and until someone can prove to us that the unborn are not truly living creatures, then we morally should adopt a principle that they are."

Reagan said that his administration, in the 20 months since he was elected, has lowered inflation and interest rates. He also accused Democrats of resorting, in the past, to "quick-fix" methods to pull the nation out of recessions.

"And after each quick fix, it seems that there was a recovery; but in about two years there would be another recession and it would be deeper and worse than before, with more unemployment and a higher inflation rate," he said.

Reagan said the answer to the present recession lies in a "solid recovery that is based on reducing government spending, a reduction of the percentage of the people's earnings that government is taking in taxes, and incentives to get the wheels of industry turning again."

Reagan said the best way "to get those wheels rolling" is to vote Republican in this fall's elections.

Republican candidates seated behind the president, including Sen. Dan Marriott and Rep. Jim Hansen, both of Utah, and a candidate for the new 3rd Congressional District, Ray Beekham, smiled at this statement.

At least two politicians were not having the best of days, however. Beekham's opponent in the Republican primaries, Howard Nielson, was reportedly wedged firmly in a traffic jam and was not able to attend.

Weber County Commissioner Robert Hunter's plans were also frustrated. He told The Daily Universe he had been invited to meet Reagan, but was told when he arrived by party officials that the plans had changed. His two colleagues met Reagan; Hunter, a Democrat, did not.

Insanity plea

A change needs to be made in the insanity defense, Wootton said. In Utah County, he said, the defense is abused and expensive for the county. He has no actual cost figures available.

The initial step in a trial in which someone claims insanity is for a doctor to look at the defendant. "Then the doctor will say, 'I can't tell,'" Wootton said. Then the person is committed to a state hospital for 30 days, at $85 a day, he said.

Wootton said he does not want to see the insanity defense completely done away with, only "altered, not eliminated."

Insanity as a defense is used rarely, according to Bertensen. But, she said, the times it is used are usually highly publicized murders, rapes and other violent crimes. She said the Hinckley trial brought a lot of needed attention to the problem, but it also "opened a total can of worms."

In the Hinckley trial, the burden of proof was on the prosecutor, Bertensen said. "When it is up to the prosecution, that's not easy. The defense should be the ones to prove the guy was nuts," she said.

The debate in the insanity issue is not on the terminology, but on "how do we handle these people," Bertensen said. A system needs to be worked out that will keep the people who are found innocent by reason of insanity in the criminal system, she said.

"The goal is not to put them in prison, just not let them out so easy. I'm sure the prisons don't want them. I just want to see more control over them after they are released from the hospitals," Bertensen said.

Cullimore said if a person is found mentally ill, he should be in a hospital instead of prison. But, he said, he would like to see the position of the insanity defense changed so that when a person is released from the hospital there is more follow-up done.

"People in the hospital promise you they will take their medicine and check in occasionally after their release, but once they get out they sort of forget about it," Cullimore said.

Michael Espin, a defense lawyer in Provo, said, "If they abolish insanity as a defense, they are going against the grain of criminal defense."

Espin said a lot of people are sick not by their own choosing. He said some of the things they do are "very real to them. They are the ones that are insane."

"The defendant in this case has remained in the state hospital longer than if he had been convicted of first-degree murder," Espin said. Many cases remain longer in the hospital than in prison, he said.

James R. Moss, associate professor of LDS Church history and an instructor in the BYU Law School, said he believes the insanity defense is a question of justification and accountability. He said he knows of no official position of the LDS Church other than the principles of accountability and responsibility taught through the atonement of Jesus Christ.

Arthur Mathews Jr. in "Mental Disability and the Criminal Law" writes, "The question of responsibility is a legal problem, the essence of which is to differentiate between those who are to be held by society as criminally blameworthy and those who are not."

Utah still uses insanity plea

By CLARK CARAS and DOUG WILKS Senior Reporters

Excusing people who are mentally ill from the penalties of committing a crime has been a part of English law for hundreds of years.

More formally, the insanity defense has been a part of English and American law since the precedent-setting case of Daniel M'Naghten who, in 1843, was acquitted on a murder charge after a jury agreed he was insane.

The "M'Naghten Rule" is still used as the basis of the insanity defense in about 20 states. The rule states that a person will not be held accountable for conviction as a criminal if "at the time of the committing the act, the party accused was laboring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing; or, if he did know it, that he did not know he was doing what was wrong."

Durham ruling

A ruling in 1951 in Durham v. United States established further that "an accused is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was the product of mental disease or defect."

The standard set forth in United States v. Freeman, 1969, was formulated in the American Law Institutes Model Penal Code and says, "A person is not responsible for criminal conduct if at the time of such conduct as a result of mental disease or defect he lacks substantial capacity either to appreciate the criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law."

Defendant excused

In short, the penal code relieves a defendant from responsibility for a crime if the person has no behavioral control because of a mental disorder.

According to Dennis Cullimore, administrative director of the forensics unit of the Utah State Hospital, Utah's insanity defense models the "Durham rule." In Utah, he said, "the accused may claim he is not guilty by reason of mental illness."

Gov. Scott M. Matheson currently has a task force studying the insanity defense. Elizabeth Bertensen, attorney for the Division of Mental Health and member of the task force, said the group is studying the pros and cons of Utah's laws dealing with the insanity defense.

Some jobless may receive extra benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jobless workers in 36 states, including Utah, can apply for up to 10 weeks of additional benefits beginning this week, thanks to implementation of a $2.2 billion supplemental unemployment program.

The program, announced Friday by Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, is designed to respond to the long-term joblessness suffered by many Americans in the current recession.

It was made possible by congressional enactment of the $98.3 billion tax increase bill last month, which included a provision financing the extra benefits giving some workers as many as 49 weeks of unemployment checks.

An additional 10 weeks of unemployment checks will be paid to those who were out of work and already getting 13 weeks of extended benefit payments beyond the basic 26-week payment period in 36 states, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico since June 1.

The Labor Department said that six to eight weeks of additional benefit checks will be supplied to out-of-work people in the other 14 states and the District of Columbia.

In these cases, six to eight weeks of supplemental benefits will be added to an eligible unemployed worker's basic 26-week compensation period.

Some 10.8 million Americans were out of work in August and the national seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was 9.8 percent of the labor force. In the week ending Aug. 28, the national insured unemployment rate was 4.7 percent — less than half the overall 9.8 percent rate. Some 4.1 million people were drawing such benefits in the last week of August.

In its statement, the Labor Department estimated that 2.2 million people will qualify for the extra unemployment checks.

Small town waits for nuke cleanup

CANONSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Long before the atomic bomb, long before nuclear power plants, residents of this western Pennsylvania community lived with wastes buried by nuclear pioneers.

Uranium processing plants, which once supplied scientist Marie Curie with radium and later helped toward building the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombs, produced more than 200,000 tons of radioactive waste since 1911. The wastes now lie beneath an industrial park near this quiet, residential suburb, about 20 miles southwest of Pittsburgh.

Saying they fear for their health, residents of Canonsburg and nearby Strabane have long urged the federal government to speed up plans for cleaning up the site.

But necessary government standards, which were to be in place by 1979, are almost three years late.

"When you didn't know, you weren't afraid. Now when you know, you're afraid. It's better not knowing," said Sophie Winseck, who unwittingly used an old vat from the processing plant to catch rainwater in her backyard.

Scientists, however, report finding only slightly higher rates of illness among those living near the radioactive site.

Standard Chemical Co. extracted radium from ore at the site in 1917. Later, the site was taken over by V.R. Corp. of America, which processed radium, burying its waste there. The Atomic Energy Commission later used the property for storage.

The industrial park is among sites identified under the Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978 as requiring prompt clean up. Within a third of a mile from the site the risk of lung cancer would be about 25 percent higher.

ENGINEERING MAJORS HAVE ENOUGH STRESS WITHOUT HAVING TO WORRY ABOUT TUITION.

If one of the angles you've been studying lately is a way to pay your tuition costs, Army ROTC would like to offer some sound advice.

Apply for an Army ROTC scholarship.

Recently, we set aside hundreds of scholarships solely for engineering majors like yourself.

Each one covers full tuition, books and other supplies, and pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect.
